I am pleased to announce that the Center for Disease and Control and Prevention (CDC) has chosen the Utah Health Plans Partnership (HPP) as a model program to be presented to the United States Congress. This presentation is intended to demonstrate that federal funds used in public health programs have a positive impact on the health of our citizens and will stress the public-private partnership that has made the HPP a success.

This is a great honor and opportunity for the HPP, and for your individual health plans. Your efforts have brought the state of Utah great success in the area of diabetes management and now the leaders of our nation will be made aware of that success.

Each member of the HPP is to be commended for your efforts. Since the inception of the HPP over nine years ago, you have remained committed to working together to enhance the health of those with diabetes in Utah. Your work has resulted in improvements in all of our diabetes-related measures. Thank you for your continued participation in this nationally recognized program and congratulations on your contributions to this significant achievement.
